

Narrator 1: (a real “people” person)

It's up to you audience. If you clap hard enough, Hansel will live. Come on people! (Shouts other words of encouragement as the audience claps harder and harder. Hansel screams and falls.) You didn't clap hard enough. He died. You know I've...done this show a lot. And every time the audience clapped hard enough to let Hansel live. Every time. (Narrator picks someone in audience) I think it really comes down to this one. This one right here. They didn't clap hard enough. Their heart wasn't really into it. How do you face your children, friend? How do you face your children?
